

interdisciplinary integration

March 26-29, 2009
Lincoln, NE

Our first annual Interdisciplinary Integration course will be offered for health professionals of all disciplines! No prerequisite courses are needed and daily registration is available. This course will offer recommendations on how to manage patients who are limited in successful outcomes through intra-discipline treatment only. Influences of the feet, cranium and the autonomic nervous system; vision and the vestibular system; and the pelvic floor; on each other and on the practitioner's examination and intervention will be outlined. Postural Restoration tests and techniques will be used to help implement this interdisciplinary integrative intervention.
